RETAIL & PRESENTATION

Market research confirms that 80 % of buying decisions are based on emotions while only 20% of them are objective. As lighting can significantly influence the atmosphere of any space, we use it in retail applications not only to guide the customers through the stores and support them to find what they need or wish to buy, but we dare to create a completely new shopping experience for them. With the right lighting, ordinary shopping becomes an extraordinary adventure.

OMS retail lighting design works in close cooperation with principles of retail psychology and follows the latest trends identified and proven to be effective and successful by the market leaders. From fashion to supermarkets, from displays to fitting rooms, we deliver projects which satisfy the buying needs of all customers and help the retailers to turn regular clients into loyal brand promoters.

OFFICE

Nowadays, office has a complex infrastructure. It has become an inspiring space which stimulates higher performance efficiency of employees but at the same time offers the possibility to relax and refresh their energy. In this context, the light plays a key role: it stimulates higher performance efficiency, supports the ability to concentrate, increases the feelings of comfort and general happiness. The proper lighting of the office space, beginning with the desk up to the open space office exceeds the boundaries of the technical standards; it fulfills the aesthetic and ergonomic functions in a still greater extent and respects the individual needs of every workplace.

OMS is great at providing modern solutions for offices, many times meeting the requirement to apply human centric principles to lighting. Using the latest lighting trends, we can stimulate people's mood, behaviour, and energy level, which, to satisfaction of both the employees and employers, turns the offices into places with opportunities for both personal and professional growth.

EDUCATION

During schooling, appropriate lighting of the educational areas plays a decisive role. The light creates a positive communication atmosphere between the teacher and students; it is able to positively affect the concentration ability and performance efficiency of the students, to create conditions in which both the students and the teachers feel comfortably and, especially, the right lighting ensures the correct perception of the displayed objects and information.

Be it playing in kindergartens, learning the alphabet, conducting scientific experiments at higher educational levels, or any other teaching process, applying scientific knowledge about the influence of the light on people and their visual and psychological well-being is extremely important. OMS goes beyond meeting the basic requirements for lighting of educational areas and takes it to the next level. Conventional wooden blackboards are replaced by the interactive ones; the paper and pen are replaced by the PC monitor; the whole concept of education has been quickly evolving, that is why we do our best to adjust our lighting solutions to these changes. Uniformity, glare prevention, implementation of sensors for energy saving, control systems, these are just some of the long list of buzzwords that have recently found their way into the world of lighting in education.

HEALTH & CARE

In healthcare, every single detail matters. And it all starts with the correct lighting. From general illumination of public areas to very specified lighting used for therapy, there is still a lot to learn about the numerous effects of light on human health. However, we have already made a great progress in some respects. Talking about human centric lighting and its benefits, we can say that OMS lighting is able to regulate the circadian rhythm, influence certain biological events, such as mood and sleep, and decrease the occurrence of feelings of distress, anxiety, or fatigue.

As every space requires different lighting, we need to carefully assess the specific requirements before each project. For example, patient room needs to be lit gently and it cannot disturb the patients so that they can rest and recover as quickly as possible. However, it also needs to be lit enough for the staff to carry out their duties and help the patients, and for the patients to distract themselves by, for example, reading or playing crosswords. On the other side, operating room lighting requires a completely different attention. There is only little compromise on the properties of correct lighting; high CRI values, extreme uniformity, elimination of glare and no flickering to name just a few basic must-haves of similar areas.

HOTELS &

GASTRO

Hospitality areas require lighting which is both functional and emotional. In hotels, clients' feelings of security and comfort go hand in hand with the need to accentuate interesting architectural elements and make the best impression. Be it a foyer or individual rooms, travellers and visitors in hotels lit by OMS never complain about dim, bad or sparse lighting.

One of the benefits we deliver along with a quality solution for hotels is human centric lighting and comfortable lighting management system. It combines the properties of daylight with the actual needs of human body. Hotel managers can play with the setting depending on their need to freshen the clients up or create a cosier and home-like atmosphere. Changing the colour temperature, RGB mixing, intensity, and many other properties of light are extremely useful when organising the most varied social events such as weddings and business meetings. We at OMS understand that the rooms have to be flexible, too. They need to be bright enough for office work, cosy enough for relax, and there are plenty other purposes which call for appropriate and easily adjustable and controllable lighting.

SPORT & LEISURE

Providing sport areas with quality lighting gives a great satisfaction. Nothing is better than contributing to the success of the sportsmen and allowing the fans to see their favourites deliver a great performance. No glare, no shadows, flexible setting, low costs, operational efficiency, that's lighting which we provide at multi-purpose sports and leisure venues.

Each sport area is different. Football stadiums are large and usually open spaces which require good lighting especially in the evening hours and at night, however, playing with emotional lighting in the fanzone or on the façade of outside stadium walls is always a plus. Gyms require a completely different approach and swimming pools are more demanding when it comes to resistance against chemicals. OMS views each space as a chance to excel itself once again, which is much appreciated by all clients who understand that for lighting of sports areas, only a strong and innovative player can win.

STREET & URBAN

Artificial lighting is an important aspect of the night landscape as it facilitates visual acuity in an environment that would otherwise be treacherous to navigate. Therefore, illumination of our streets and urban spaces is fundamental to our safety as well as our visual and psychological comfort during the darker hours. Such illumination demands much from a lighting system, making it necessary to bear in mind many factors and to build on past experience and acquired knowledge. Furthermore, if developed by capable hands, street and urban lighting can do so much more than act as the medium of that all-important illumination. It can transform the aesthetic appearance of streets, squares, pathways, bridges and parks, and bring a new lease of life to our night landscape.

Another benefit of a well-designed urban lighting is its power to support the economy of communities and cities both by attracting visitors and by creating a sustainable environment. Combined with easy controlling and monitoring, it decreases energy consumption and thus saves operation costs and environment. With the right lighting curves we achieve perfect illumination of the street target and with zero values above 90 we setup lighting without causing the lighting smog and save the night sky.

INDUSTRY

The fact that people spend up to 80% of their productive life at work increases the importance of the appropriate and biologically efficient lighting at work. The need to provide a quality lighting is even more urgent at workplaces which are in constant operation, i.e. at jobs which require that the employees work on shifts. In the manufacturing sphere and all lines of business a correctly designed lighting system can positively affect the performance efficiency, concentration and wakefulness of the employees in all working shifts, minimise the occurrence of failures and the risks of injuries.

For employers, appropriate LED lighting brings double benefits. Not only does it positively influence well-being and work of employees, but it also has incredible effect on power consumption, waste production, and operation and maintenance costs.

ARCHITECTURE

& MEDIA

Light has long and extensively been described as the 4th or 5th dimension of architecture. Archtainment as a result of technical and artistic crossover between architectural and entertainment lighting is gaining on complexity as well as on popularity. In the past, architectural lighting was a costly, extravagant and complex process. However, nowadays, the glow of glass-walled office buildings or artistic illumination of cathedrals has become part and parcel of our lives. It is because techniques and effects not possible a few years ago are now readily at hand for architects and lighting designers, allowing them to create truly amazing pieces of artwork.

Lighting has clearly taken on a new role: that of shaping our perception of the world around us at night and transforming our urban landscapes into visual feasts that delight senses, and thus entertain. This new role can be well-used not only in architecture, but it is widely used in other applications, such as media, too.
